bespite the raw weather and gloomy sky yesterday afternoon, the second day's races of the Chickasaw jockey club were well attended, quite a number of ladies being among the visitors. The Great Southern brase band opened with the Vectoriar Polka. The weather was just right for good racing, bracing both horse and man, and permitting good runs without much fatigue. At an early hour and long before the racing had commenced, it was not more than one hundred yards from the straight for good-second among the visitors, and no little difference of opinion was noted as to the relative result of the borses entered for the day.

THE PARIS MUTUAL POOLS
received merited patronage, and, so far as we could learn, gave general satisfaction. As this is a comparatively new system, and not well understood on our course, we deem it appropriate to the course, we deem it appropriate to the course. course, we deem it appropriate to give an explanation of its system. The tickets in the Paris mutual pools are sold at five dollars each. The registers posted on the post at the stand constantly show the number of tickets sold on each horse to a race and also the total number of its. in a race, and also the total numbersold.

When the race is decided, multiply the otal number of tickets by five, which it is the gross amount of money in the ood. From this deduct the commission of five per cent. to the pool-seller, and you have the net value of the pool. Divide this by the number of tickets sold on the winning horse, and you have the value of each winning ticket. Tickets in the Paris mutual pools are good but for two days, and all of these pools are sanctioned and guaranteed by the club. The introduction of this system has added much interest to pool-selling on the grounds, a feature much desired and greatly to be cooraged, especially in races of mile heats and repeat. The difference in wagers on the antire as determined by the offices, as determined by the result of in first heat, necessarily affects the amounts of pools and preferences for successful heats, especially when the favorite falls behind the field. Yesterday's sport commenced with a MILE-AND-A-HALF RACE, open to all ages, for the jockey-club ourse of $200. It being known that there were eight entries in this race, there was a general enthusiasm aroused as to the result of the run, and the edds for the favorite. For this race there were the following

THE HOME-STRETCH. Expectation was raised to the highest pitch; for the straight track thence to the string allowed a fair open run, no inside being of advantage in savings of dis-tance. Stampede now seemed to put forth all his muscle, shooting forward from his companions, soon closed the daylight between himself and Ortolan, who was to the right of Adams. This moved up Ortolan, and when a hundred yards had been hoofed from the last halt-mile-post these three horses were almost blanketed. On they came, with panting nestrils and outstretched neck, seemingly conscious of the very interests at stake. Stampede lengthened Ortslon, and had evened Limestone, but all at once an untirm pitch reared him almost a neck if not a half length. His rider now pulled down heavy and urged him onward, for only one hundred and fifty a ards intervened between the horses and the string. It was the dernier report, and the illfavorite, as he was, came down to the fun, and when within fifty yards of the string shot ahead of the leader. Edwin string shot ahead of the leader. Edwin Adams, under heavy pulls, encouraged by this, also commenced his Longfellow strides, and, as if determined to share the first honors, Adams also, through the urging of his rider, made a desperate effort to gain the goal. Loosened reins and applied spurs, though fully appreciated, as evidenced by his outstretched neck, did not save Adams from defeat, for amid deafening cheers. Stampede passed under the string with a length to spare, the time being 2:45].

> Concert by the Cheir of the Synagogue of the Children of Israel Under the direction of Prof. Winkler, one of the oldest and most accomplished of our resident musicians, the choir of the congregation of the Children of Israel will shortly give a concert at the Memphis club hall, the proceeds to be applied to the purchase of an organ. We need hardly say to our readers that this choir is composed of some of our best amateurs, and that among the choirs of our city it justly occupies a very high position. This it has been achieved by successful leadership and at the expense of an amount of pains-taking effort seldom expended by organists or leaders anywhere. Those who know Prof. Winkler know that he is just the man to make the most of the material at hand, and that he leaves no effort un-tried to secure success. In the present instance, as we have said, his material happens to have been of the best and worthy his training and care; we may, therefore, promise our citizens a concert of unusual excellence, one that will compare favorably with any we have had this season. When the programme has been determined upon, we shall have much pleasure in laying it before our readers, who, we hope, will hold themselves in readiness for the occasion. RESERVE your seats for the Old Folks concert, by the Esther Club, at Cleaves & Carnes' book store, 281 Main street.
